To Build Paper Mill In Israel, First In Near East, At Cost Of $3,500,000

Construction of a mill to produce printing and writing paper and kraft multi-wall bag paper is planned in Israel. The plant, said to be the first in the Near East to make these products, is to cost $3,500,000. Completion of plans for the project, which will mark a major advance in Israel's industrialization program, was announced jointly by the two major sponsors, the Palestine Economic Corporation and the Mazer family, which controls the Hudson Pulp and Paper Company.

Plans for the mill, which is to be put in construction in the fall and to be in operation by 1953, were outlined jointly by Robert Szold, chairman of the board of the corporation, and Joseph M. Mazer, treasurer of Hudson. The corporation has been active many years in establishing new industries in Palestine. The Mazer family has been identified with the paper industry more than fifty years. Hudson, in which it is the major stockholder, owns and operates mills in Florida, Vermont and Maine.

Messrs. Szold and Mazer said the new mill would be owned and operated by American Israeli Paper Mills, Ltd. The latter, an Israeli corporation with headquarters at Tel Aviv, was organized early this year by Palestine Economic and the Mazer family, with Joseph M. Mazer as chairman of the board of directors.

Paper manufacturers and merchants in the United States, Israel, South America, Europe and Australia also are participating in the project, it was stated by the New York Times.

The announcement followed signing of a contract between American Israeli Paper Mills, Ltd., and Merritt-Chapman & Scott Overseas, Inc., under which the latter is to design the mill and supervise its construction and equipment for operation. Merritt-Chapman & Scott Overseas, Inc., is a wholly owned subsidiary of Merritt-Chapman & Scott Corporation.

The mill will be constructed on a twenty-acre site at Hadera, a city several miles inland from the Mediterranean at about the half-way mark astride the key north-south rail and highway routes linking Haifa and Tel Aviv. The main unit of the plant, a two-story, steel frame building about 480 by 100 feet, will house stock preparation equipment, a 120-inch Fourdrinier paper machine, steam boilers and converting equipment to cut and package the finished product.

Daily production will be geared for forty-eight tons of semi-fine writing paper, forty-eight tons of kraft multi-wall bag paper or thirty-five tons of printing and tablet paper. All sulphite, kraft and ground wood pulp used will be imported, most of it from Scandinavian countries. Construction of a mill at the site to produce ground woodpulp from Israeli timber is under contemplation.

Medical Center In Israel To Cost $5,500,000

Comprehensive plans for the construction of a new medical center in Jerusalem at a cost of $5,500,000 that will embrace medical and nursing schools and a 430-bed hospital were announced by Hadassah, the Woman's Zionist Organization of America. Ground breaking for the project, which will be constructed jointly by Hadassah and Hebrew University in Jerusalem, is expected to take place this month.

Before a large group of American hospital planners, administrators and architects the scale model of the hospital was placed on display in the offices of Hadassah, 1819 Broadway, New York. Among those present was Dr. Theodore Rosenthal, assistant Commissioner of Health. Hadassah leaders were headed by Mrs. S. W. Halprin, national president, and Mrs. Rebecca Shulman, chairman of the medical center building committee.

The Hadassah-Hebrew University Medical Center was designed by Joseph Neufeld, who was well known in European and Palestinian architectural circles before he came to the U.S. in 1940.

He said that a feature of the new center would be a radial unit for the acutely ill which, by reducing walking distances for physicians and nurses, "should increase efficiency and result in economy of operation." The radial unit is based on a semi-circle with utility facilities and nurses' work areas concentrated in a core that is readily accessible to all parts of the nursing floor. The core's distance [illegible] the Henrietta Szold School of Nursing with teaching and living facilities for 150 nurses, the 430-bed Rothschild-Hadassah University Hospital and the Hebrew University-Hadassah Medical School.

Was Inventor Of Twelve-Tone System In Music

Arnold Schoenberg, composer and teacher, who invented the controversial twelve-tone system in music, died at his home in suburban Brentwood, Calif., at the age of 76. He had been ill for some time and only in June he had cancelled a teaching engagement because of his health.

A revolutionary in the music field, Mr. Schoenberg, who became a United States citizen in 1940, was recognized as a leading composer. However, he himself felt that many years, possibly fifty, would be required before he would be completely understood, basing his view on the delayed appreciation of famous compositions of other leaders, says the New York Times.

In May, 1933, Mr. Schoenberg left Berlin, Germany, of his own accord because of Hitler's oppression of the Jews. In November he went to the United States to teach at the Malkin Conservatory in Boston, Mass., eventually settling in Los Angeles, where he taught at the University of California until his retirement in 1944. He continued to teach privately after his retirement and usually had about eight pupils.

In 1947, Mr. Schoenberg was the recipient of the Award of Merit for Distinguished Achievement given by the National Institute of Arts and Letters to "an eminent foreign artist, composer or writer living in America." The award carried a $1,000 prize.

The composer's first wife, Mathilde Von Zemlinsky, died in 1923. They had two children, Mrs. Gertrud Greissle and Georg. In August, 1924, he married Gertrud Kolisch, the sister of the well-known violinist, Rudolf Kolisch, who was once one of his pupils. They had three children, Nuria, Ronald and Lawrence.

[illegible] the violent tempest of twentieth-century music raged. Hostile demonstrations marked most of the first performances of his work. Pitched polemical battles—as fiercely favoring his revolutionary "atonal" twelve-tone compositions as opposing—swept central Europe in the early Nineteen Hundreds and then, in turn, the rest of the musical world.

Yet at his death there were few — no matter how little they warmed to his music itself — who could deny either the importance of his influence or that he was a great musical theorist and teacher. And there were many voices who predicted that the Austrian composer's music would finally be accepted in much the same way as the later work of Stravinsky and the compositions of Bela Bartok.

It was Shoenberg's contention that the old dynamic laws of music, tonic to dominant to tonic, were no longer valid, that the next natural step in music was the breaking away from the established harmonic rules and the formulation of a twelve-tone system, by which all twelve tones of the chromatic scale were of equal value, according to the New York Times.

This revolutionary type of formal structure consists primarily in the use of a "basic series," comprised of all of the twelve tones, with none repeated. The tones may be placed in order and at any intervals desired, and from this series all of the themes are derived. Regular recourse to the contrapuntal devices of inversion "cancrans" (reversal) and others are essential features of the polyphonic structure, and symmetrical patterning is banned.

Many have protested that such a method of composition is self-conscious and artificial. But the composer and his followers asserted that the twelve-tone composition existed in practice before it was developed in theory.

It is of interest to note that the term, "atonality" to describe the Shoenbergian school of composition—which was given to the music by the composer's opponents—has never been accepted by him, since atonality in music, as he once remarked, is an impossibility. The composer went on to point out that his music had tones like any other and that it was the arrangement that made the difference. He preferred his method to be known merely as a system of composing with twelve tones, says the New York Times.

Mr. Schoenberg also maintained that none of his works was at variance with the principles taught by the old masters and that ultimately it will be their music which will prove how right his path has been.

Book Gives Official Self-Portrait Of Hitler, Shows He Was Monster

A new book: "Hitler's Tischgespraeche im Fuehrerhauptquartier 1941-1942 (Hitler's Table Conversations at the Fuehrer's Headquarters, 1941-1942)," is the first of a series of studies sponsored by the German Institute for History of the National Socialist Period. This semi-official body has Dr. Theodor Heuss, scholar-president of the Federal Republic, as an honorary member of its board of directors. It receives modest financial aid from several state governments.

The mission of the institute is to publish documentary material that will represent sound scholarship but will not be over the heads of the public. This first volume contains 400 pages from Hitler's discourses to his twenty-six political and military messmates during the year before Alamein and Stalingrad, when his Third Reich had reached its greatest extent. It is drawn from the record rewritten at the time from stenographic notes, according to the New York Times.

Although Hitler sometimes takes his cue from the news of the day, this volume does not include the minutes of meetings at which decisions were reached. That came later, when Hitler increasingly distrusted his generals and wanted to check up on them, as is shown in the volume "Hitler Directs His War," edited by Prof. Felix Gilbert, of Bryn Mawr and published in the United States last November.

This earlier document presents the Fuehrer's views on the broadest questions of politics, morals, nations, races and classes, at a time when he had already begun to impose them in the conquered lands of Eastern Europe.

It was taken down with Hitler's approval, at the suggestion of Martin Bormann, so that these pearls of wisdom would be preserved for the edification of future leaders of his Reich. It is therefore an official self-portrait—and it confirms the impressions that all Germany's neighbors had already formed the hard way.

The editor, Dr. Gerhard Ritter, a Freiburg University historian, has grouped these carefully dated selections under such headlines as Foreign Policy, War, Internal Policy, Nazi Doctrines, Race, Morals and Religion. He declares that it is shot through with errors of historical fact, which he has not the space to annotate and correct in this volume. It is a rich haul of material for professional historians to disentangle.

The immediate importance of this political testament, however, is the impression it makes on the average German reader. If they follow the lead of Dr. Ritter in his introduction, it will fill them with horror at the figure they used to idolize.

A total of 3,500 immigrants were absorbed in Beersheba during the month of May, 10% of the total immigration to Israel during the month. Gateway to the Negev, this town is growing rapidly. It is absorbing an average of 1,000 immigrants monthly and at present has a population of over 15,000. Beersheba's housing program included the completion last month of 600 flats for new immigrants who came to the town during 1950, completion of 800 additional flats by the winter, and the provision of 1,752 units by Passover 1952. In addition, 1,000 two-roomed flats are being constructed for immigrants with means of their own.

THE TOMATO WITH "Yichis"

Heinz insists on tomatoes with "yichis" —tomatoes with an impressive family history. Pedigreed seedlings are reared in special hothouses; they are transplanted and tended by specially chosen farmers. Cooked the old-fashioned home way, blended with rich, heavy cream, these "Aristocrat" tomatoes make Heinz Condensed Cream of Tomato Soup a "meichel"—truly "a milchige meichel for a mayvin." No ingredients used, contrary to Jewish Dietary Laws!

Bureau Places 12 Rabbis, Will Last

The Bureau of Employment for rabbis, created by the Associated Rabbinate of America, has in the few months of its operations placed twelve religious leaders in congregations and is well on its way to success. Some 2,000 letters have been mailed to representatives of congregations in all parts of the country, and many more placements are expected soon.

The Bureau of Employment, with headquarters at the Rabbinate, 326 Park Row Building, New York 38, was created to bridge the gap between a rabbi seeking a congregation and a congregation seeking a leader. The service is free, and concentrates on matching the talents of the rabbi to the needs of the congregation.

Congregations seeking rabbis are provided by the Bureau with a list of candidates, giving their qualifications, experience and personalities, and their place in religious and community life. The congregations then have the opportunity to summon one or two candidates, from whom they can choose their spiritual leader.

SHORE-STROMBERG

The marriage of Helene, daughter of Mrs. Goldie Stromberg, of Buffalo, N.Y., to Earl Shore, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Shore, 20 Bellwoods Avenue, took place on Sunday, June 24, at five o'clock, in the garden of the bride's home, in Buffalo. Rabbi C. Weinstein, of Buffalo, officiated. The matron of honour was Mrs. C. Brown, 143 Dewbourne Avenue, Toronto. Allan Shore, brother of the groom, was best man. Mr. and Mrs. Earl Shore are residing in Toronto, at 20 Bellwoods Avenue.

MANDELL-TANENBAUM

The marriage of Frances Joy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Tanenbaum, 222 Lonsmount Drive, to Marvin Zemor Mandell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Mandell, of Hamilton, took place on Sunday, June 17, at five o'clock, at Beth Hamidrash Hagodal Synagogue. Rabbi Reuben Slonim officiated, assisted by Cantor David Greengarten. The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a white gown of appliqued organdy, fashioned with wide V-neckline, in front and back, large, short, puffed sleeves, and bouffant skirt that extended to a long train. Her three-tiered tulle illusion veil was gathered to an organdy Juliet cap, trimmed with white violets, and she carried a white Bible adorned with white gardenias, and streamers of Stephanotis. Mrs. Henry S. Sager, of Los Angeles, Cal., was matron of honour, in an ankle-length gown of pale pink nylon sheer, trimmed with pink lace. Her hat was of pastel flowers and pink stiff veiling, and she carried a cascade of pale pink carnations. The bridesmaids wore ankle-length strapless gowns of nylon net and lace, designed with trumpet skirts, and matching stoles. They were, Mrs. Richard Gerofsky, of Hamilton, in blue, with cascade of Talisman roses; and Miss Ruth Robins, in yellow, with cascade of pink roses. They had matching flowered hats, trimmed with stiff veiling. Esther-elke Tanenbaum was junior bridesmaid, wearing pink Swiss organdy, patterned in eyelet, over pink taffeta; also a cap of pastel flowers, and carried a nosegay of baby roses, sweet peas, and babies' breath. Wayne Tanenbaum was best man. The ushers were: Wilfred Gerofsky, Richard Gerofsky, L. Roefe, Allen Mandell, and Bernard Slavin. The altar was banked with white standards of hollyhocks and chrysanthemums, set in large white baskets, and white candelabra. White chrysanthemums, trimmed with white satin ribbon, decorated the aisles. The bride's mother wore a gown of orchid-coloured chiffon, over dusty-pink faille, with matching headdress made of forget-me-nots and rhinestones; and corsage of pink roses. The groom's mother was in a blue-grey gown of Chantilly lace, with matching lace and draped tulle hat, and corsage of Talisman roses. For the cruise to Havana, Cuba; British Honduras, and Guatemala, and also to the United States, the bride travelled in a pale silk dress of soft brown, with matching fitted coat; also a pink felt hat, trimmed with pale orchid-coloured organza, scattered with tiny roses; multi-coloured mesh accessories, and corsage of mauve orchids. Out-of-town guests were: Mr. and Mrs. B. Sager, Misses Beverley and Gloria Sager, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Sager and son, Robert; Mr. and Mrs. Max Sager and children, Esther Ellen and Albert; Miss Rose Linder, of New York; Mr. and Mrs. V. Hoffman, of Reading, Pa.; Dr. and Mrs. Henry Sager and son, Mark, of Los Angeles, Cal.; Mrs. E. Levy, Mrs. P. Eisenberg, David Hertz, C. Koren, Miss Ruth Greenbaum, of Buffalo, N. Y.; Mrs. Jacob Slovin, of Hartford, Mich.; Mrs. F. MONTREAL MEETINGS

● The Combined Jewish Appeal and the United Israel Appeal, two major, local, fund-raising bodies, will pool their efforts from November 1 to 15 to conduct the First Joint Campaign. The drive will provide funds for 1952 operations for the two groups of agencies. "This drive, to be jointly conducted by the CJA and the UIA, constitutes the most important campaign merger in the history of Jewish organizational life in Montreal. We know that it expresses the will of the Jewish community", said an announcement signed by Samuel Bronfman, honorary chairman of the Combined Jewish Appeal; Jack A. Klein, O.B.E., chairman of the CJA board of directors; Samuel Schwisberg, K.C., co-president of the Zionist Organization of Canada; and Joseph N. Frank, honorary secretary of the ZOC. No objective for the First Joint Campaign has been set. The fact that there is no overlapping in the fiscal years of the two organizations greatly facilitated the merger. Contributions which were made a few months ago to the United Israel Appeal are for the year 1951. The Combined Jewish Appeal raised its 1951 funds in the campaign conducted in November, 1950. There will be no separate United Israel Appeal campaign in 1952. The first step taken in bringing about this unification was an informal meeting, called by Samuel Bronfman, honorary chairman of both the Combined Jewish Appeal and United Israel Appeal, at which the issue was given a full and open discussion, and several United Israel Appeal organizational meetings followed. After consultation with Mr. Schwisberg and Hyman Grover, national chairman of the United Israel Appeal, the UIA decided to approach the Combined Jewish Appeal for a joint campaign. At a joint committee meeting of the CJA and UIA, both groups made specific, preliminary agreements and subsequent action by the board of directors of the Combined Jewish Appeal brought the united set-up into existence. Present at the joint committee meeting as representatives of the CJA were Mr. Klein; Donald B. Hurwitz, executive director; Monroe Abbey, Philip Garfinkle, A. H. Jassby, and Dr. George Strean. UIA representatives were Mr. Frank, Joel Sternthal, Samuel Levine, Rabbi Jesse Schwartz, executive director of the ZOC; and Moe Levitt. Leon Levin, a UIA representative, was unable to attend the meeting. Steps are already being taken to merge the campaign organizations and records, an enormous undertaking which will be completed in time for the drive in the fall. This combination of the major fund-raising efforts in Montreal follows the pattern set during the past decade in all large communities on this continent.

● SPANISH and Portuguese Synagogue Sisterhood annual donor luncheon, on Tuesday, September 25, at 12.30 p.m., in the Champlain Room, Mount Royal Hotel will view a fashion show by Holt Renfrew and Co. Ltd. Mrs. Albert B. Regenstreif and Miss Jennie Erdrich are co-conveners; Mrs. Moe Ginsberg, tickets; Miss Daphne Montefiore, publicity. A souvenir programme will list donors' names. There will be door prizes.

● JEWISH PUBLIC Library rally for building campaign workers will be held on Tuesday, August 7, at 8.30 p.m., at the Mount Royal Hotel. Israel Rabinovitch and Harvey Golden will be guest speakers. Solomon Winkler, president of the Jewish Public Library, and chairman of the campaign, will preside.

They Speak For Israel In Washington

BY MURRAY FRANK

Israel's diplomatic staff in Washington today is a seasoned and confident lot. Gone is the inexperience and clumsiness which characterized its activities during these first hectic months of Israel's statehood, which was inevitable under those trying circumstances. It did not take very long to shake off the dust of 2000 years of homelessness and join the family of nations as an equal among equals.

A few weeks after Israel had rounded out three years of independent statehood, Ambassador Abba Eban completed his first year as chief of Israel's diplomatic mission in the United States capital. He was appointed to that post in June 1950, while retaining also his function as Permanent Head of Israel's Delegation to the United Nations. In both of these posts he has distinguished himself eminently by broadening the sphere of cordial relations between Israel and the United States, as well as by his brilliant record in the United Nations whereby Israel gained the respect of the world for its advocacy of Justice, morality and peace.

During the first two years, the Israel Embassy was confronted with the problem of organization, acquisition of staff and sufficient quarters, establishment of relationships with the diplomatic, economic, cultural and other agencies of the U.S. Government, and with the foreign diplomatic corps in Washington. It was a period of development, expansion and acclimatization. This was ably accomplished under Mr. Eban's predecessor Eliahu Elath.

The third year, under Mr. Eban, was a year of growth in depth. Contacts were firmly established with government agencies relating to agriculture, industry, commerce, public health, labor, and exchange of cultural information and diplomacy. With the [illegible] and the continued influx of immigrants, economic and other problems have become weightier. Hence, the past year saw increasing negotiations with the United States in the economic sphere (e.g., the second Export-Import Bank loan for $35 million for agricultural development, the application for a grant-in-aid of $150 million, also raw materials and other supply problems).

The Embassy's staff has undergone considerable change in the past year. A few who had been with the Israel Embassy before are now working in the Foreign Office in Jerusalem, some are representing Israel in diplomatic missions abroad, while others have taken their place in Washington. Eleven major officials of the Embassy are on the accredited diplomatic list of the Department of State. Upon them falls the responsibility for all policy matters and official representation. With the exception of a very few most have joined Israel's diplomatic mission here in the past year and have not yet had the opportunity to become widely known to the American Jewish community.

Abba Eban was born in Capetown, South Africa, in 1915, of Lithuanian Jewish parents. The family subsequently came to England, where his mother worked in the Zionist Office in London at the time of the Balfour Declaration in 1917. He was educated in England, specialized in Oriental Languages at Cambridge University from which he was graduated in 1938 and remained there to do research. In 1940, he came to Jerusalem as liaison officer for Allied Headquarters to obtain Jewish volunteers for special military missions in the Near East and Europe. He later served as instructor at the Middle East Arab Center in Jerusalem and travelled widely throughout the Near East.

In 1946, Eban joined the Jewish Agency staff and the following year was named liaison officer with the United Nations Special Committee on Palestine (UNSCOP). His next assignment was as a staff member of the Jewish Agency delegation to the historical U.N. General Assembly which approved, on November 29, 1947, the creation of a Jewish state. On May 18, 1948, three days after Israel came into being, he became its representative to the United Nations, where he exerted full effort to obtain international intervention to halt the Arab attack on Israel and secure an armistice. In subsequent efforts, he pleaded the case for Israel's admission to the U.N. and fought off attempts to internationalize Jerusalem. Following Israel's admission to the U.N. on May 11, 1949, Eban became its permanent representative and several months ago was named a member of the U.N. Peace Committee. He is 36 years old, is married and has one son.

Next in rank is Theodore Kollek, appointed last October as Minister. Born in Austria in 1911, the son of a director of the Rothschild banking firm, he was educated there and in Czechoslovakia. He later came to England where he founded a Zionist pioneer [illegible] proceeded to Palestine in 1934 to join a pioneer group at Kinneret, and three years later helped establish the settlement of Ein Gev. In 1942, Kollek became the Jewish Agency's liaison officer with the British forces in the Middle East, and served with Allied intelligence in Turkey. There he organized the Jewish Agency's office and established contact with the Jewish underground in Europe through which important information was obtained for Allied intelligence.

After the war, Kollek worked for the Agency in London and New York. When Arab-Jewish hostilities began, following the U.N. partition decision, he organized the Palestine (Israel) Supply Mission to purchase essential supplies for Israel. In 1939 he returned to Ein Gev, where he lived with his wife and son until last fall when he was named to his present post.

Dr. Moshe Keren, Counselor of the Embassy for the past year and a half, was born in Berlin 50 years ago, received a Ph.D. degree from the University of Gottingen, and was a staff writer for various German newspapers until the coming of Hitler. In 1934, he came to Palestine where he was associated with private and public institutions until the outbreak of the war. He served with the British Army from 1941 until 1946 and was discharged with the rank of Captain. He then joined the staff of the daily "Haaretz" as an assistant editor. After the establishment of Israel, Dr. Keren was with the Foreign Ministry's Information Department and later headed the Government's Information Bureau. He assists the Ambassador in political and diplomatic matters.

Samah Cecil Hyman, the Economic Counselor, is 52 years old. He was born and educated in London, and served with the Jewish Legion in Palestine during the first World War. In 1920 he returned to London, but two years later settled in Palestine and joined the staff of Barclays Bank, with which he was associated until his appointment last September to his Washington post. During World War II he was a member of the Government's Panel of Arbitrators for trade disputes, and in 1948 he became manager of the Jerusalem branch of Barclays Bank. His wife, Dr. Ann Foner, is research assistant at the Hebrew University's Parasitology Department.

Yehuda Harry Levin, the Press and Public Relations Counselor, joined the Embassy in August 1950. He was born in South Africa in 1907, studied at the Universities of South Africa and Oxford, and settled in Palestine in 1927. For nearly two decades he was a correspondent of the London Daily Herald, carrying out special assignments in Europe, the Middle East and Africa. During World War II, he was war correspondent in North Africa, Burma and other areas. Later he was radio commentator for short periods in South Africa and England. He was long associated also with the Jewish National Fund office in Jerusalem and became director of its Public Relations Department in 1946.

During the fighting and siege of Jerusalem in 1948, as part of his duties with the Haganah, he conducted the English section of its underground broadcasting service. He subsequently wrote a book on his experience and observations, published in London under the title "Jerusalem Embattled". It appeared in New York last year under the title "I Saw the Battle of Jerusalem". He entered Israel's diplomatic service in 1949 as Consul-General to Australia and New Zealand, and a year later was transferred to Washington. His wife, Ruth, is a painter who has exhibited in London, Israel and Australia.

Col. Chaim Herzog, the Military Attache and elder son of Israel's Chief Rabbi Dr. I. H. Herzog, was born in 1919 in Ireland, where his father held a rabbinical post. In 1935 he was sent to Palestine to complete his Hebrew studies, and three years later came to England to study law at the Universities of London and Cambridge. Early in World War II he joined the British Army as a private, served with various units throughout Western Europe, and was discharged in 1946 as Major. He practiced law for several years, then joined the Jewish defence forces serving in the siege of Jerusalem and other sectors as a brigade chief of staff, and was subsequently attached to the general staff as director of military intelligence. In 1950 he was promoted to Colonel, and several months later he came to Washington.

The Agricultural Attache, Dr. Yehuda Lowe, is 46 years old and a native of Germany. He received his Doctor of Agriculture diploma in Berlin in 1932, and worked at the Research Institute for Agricultural Marketing. The following year he came to Palestine where he was an instructor at Ben Shemen until 1935. He was later with the Jewish Agency helping to plan agricultural settlements, then joined the Research Station at Rehobot where he was engaged in farm management research. Between 1942 and 1950 he was agricultural adviser to the Anglo-Palestine Bank, and since the establishment of Israel has served with the Government's Coordinating Center and as a director of the Agricultural Bank.

The only woman member of Israel's diplomatic mission in Washington is Miss Esther Herlitz, First Secretary. Born in Germany, she came to Palestine as a child, and was graduated from the Hebrew Teachers College in Jerusalem. In 1942, she joined the British Army (A.T.S.), served in Palestine and Egypt, and was discharged in 1946 as a Lieutenant. She was employed by the Palestine Government as a resettlement officer for veterans, and in 1947 became secretary for the Arab Affairs Division in the Jewish Agency's Political Department. With the establishment of Israel, she joined its defense forces and was second in command of a Women's Battalion (Chen) in Jerusalem. Later she became Deputy Head of the Foreign Ministry's United States Division. In 1949 she was an adviser to the Israel Delegation at the UN, and last December she was named to her post in Washington.

Meir Shalit, First Secretary, is a native of Kovno, Lithuania, where he was born in 1921 and brought to Palestine as a child. He attended the Agricultural School at Pardes Hanna, served with the British Army in the Middle East during the war and with the Jewish Brigade in Europe, and was discharged in 1946 with the rank of Captain. Early in 1948 he joined the Israel defense forces as battalion adjutant and later became General Staff Liaison Officer with the UN observers in Israel. He entered the Israel diplomatic service and was appointed to Washington in the fall of 1949.

The Military Attache's two assistants are Wing Commander Yehuda Giladi and Lt. Col. Joseph Porath, Giladi, born in Tel Aviv 34 years ago, studied aeronautical engineering at the University of London and worked in England during the war as an aircraft designer. In 1946 he returned to Palestine, served in the Haganah and later in the Israel Air Force as deputy director of engineering. In 1949 he was named Assistant Air Attache with the Embassy.

Porath was appointed Assistant Military Attache in the summer of 1950. During World War II he was staff captain with a branch of General Headquarters of the British Middle East Forces. From the beginning of the War of Liberation in Israel in 1948 he was connected with the organization of the Israel Army's General Staff and later headed the Staff Duties Branch.

Washington's officialdom and its huge diplomatic corps have long ago accepted Israel's diplomats into their midst, almost as old-timers at the game of diplomacy. They have long since ceased to regard them as upstarts or the newest wonder of the world. These are the people who speak for Israel in Washington. They enjoy honor and esteem, but one should not overlook the arduous nature of their tremendous responsibilities, particularly at this time of general world tension and uncertainty.

Arnold Schoenberg was born in Vienna on September 13, 1874. Attracted to music from his earliest years, he already played the violin by the time he was 12 and had composed a number of duets for the instrument. He later taught himself the 'cello and composed several trios and a quartet for a group of school mates with whom he played chamber music.

His father died during his boyhood and left the youth in impoverished circumstances, but he persisted in his self-study of music. He remained entirely untaught in composition until a friend showed some of his work to Alexander von Zemlinsky, who knew Brahms and was considered an authority. Zemlinsky offered to teach him counterpoint, the only musical instruction Schoenberg ever received.

On the basis of the score of the first part of his "Gurre-Lieder," Richard Strauss used his influence to obtain a teaching position and a scholarship for Mr. Schoenberg at the Stern Conservatory in Berlin. In 1903 the composer returned to Vienna, where he made the friendship of Gustav Mahler, then a power in the musical life of that city, who thought highly of him.

The Task Of Liberal Judaism

BY DR. I. I. MATTUCK, RABBI, OF LONDON, ENGLAND

There are many differences among us, and none would wish for their complete removal. For differences issue from freedom, and freedom is as the life of the human spirit. Salvation cannot come through servitude; the soul that would bind itself unto God must be free from the authority of men in what concerns God. "The righteous man lives by his faith." The way of God cannot be walked in chains, whether ceremonial or credal chains. When great faith has been combined with subservience to authority, the faith had first freely accepted the authority. There have been men of great piety who obeyed in the divine character of its every detail. When that belief is destroyed, obedience becomes mere outward conformity. But "God calls for the heart."

The belief in freedom with the effective recognition of the duty to exercise it in the worship of God (Leshem Shamayim) is to me fundamental in my attitude to Judaism. Liberal Judaism is to me not a modified Law interpreted by a new authority. Its only authority is the spirit as it works in the individual Jew and in the community of Jews. The Law becomes for it a symbol of law, pointing to the fundamental truth in the religious life that man attains to the highest expression of his nature when he seeks to know and to do what God demands of him.

It is the permanent function of Liberalism in religion to combine Tradition and Truth into an harmonious unity. Such a task can never be completed; growing knowledge makes it endless. Nor can it wait, for sometimes knowledge grows apace. Liberal Judaism must watch all developments of human thought, not to hurl anathemas against ideas which contradict some element in traditional Judaism, but to use all that is true for the enrichment and enlargement of Judaism.

There are some reasons why Liberal Judaism can, more than any other religion, combine religion with all truth; it has inherited a comparative freedom from dogma; not complete freedom, for Judaism did have definite doctrines, but for the most part they deal with an aspect of human life where scientific investigation does not enter either to prove or to deny. They may be enriched and enlarged by growing knowledge, not harmed or destroyed.

Here lies the strength of Liberal Judaism in that it makes Judaism a living religion for those who, by temperament, reason or training, must accept the results of science or historical study and the like. It is the Judaism for the Jew who thinks universally; the Ghetto mentality cannot understand it, and still less appreciate it. The Jew who has freed himself from Ghettoism will learn, where he has not done so already, that he cannot find life in his Judaism, still less will his children find it, except he free his Judaism from its Ghetto limitations, and thus make it comprehensive of all truth.

The first aim of Liberal Judaism must be to create an appropriate form of Jewish piety. What would be the characteristic qualities of that piety? It must necessarily be different in some ways from the ideal of Jewish piety in the past, but in other ways it may be like it. It would, of course, be a feeling of intimate relation with God. Like Jewish traditional piety, it would stress the worship of God through Study. For many, perhaps, this ideal will seek expression, in industry or commerce, by acts of supreme justice or thoughtfulness, which will show a love of God, because they are more than the laws of men require.

Because we believe Liberal Judaism can establish in the individual Jew a devout loyalty to Judaism, we would entrust to it the future of the House of Israel. In what Liberal Judaism does to maintain the Jewish religion, it works also for the perpetuation of Israel. This I consider the second part of the task of Liberal Judaism, to maintain the unified life of Israel. But we would do this, not only by some external devices whether of ceremonies or organisation, but also by constant emphasis on the spirit of that Judaism, on devotion to the spiritual life of Israel, on reverence for Israel's past, and on hopeful striving to establish Israel's influence in the life of humanity.

The third part of the task of Liberal Judaism is to establish Judaism as a universal religion, that is, as a religious influence in all lands. The first generation of Reform or Liberal Jews had much to do to free Judaism from Ghettoism. Some of them did envisage it as a universal religion, but the practical corollary of that conception was for them limited to a negative application. The Prayer Books show something of what I mean. They are distinguished from the Traditional Prayer Book by what they omit; not by anyhing that they add, or by any significant reinterpretation.

To omit was at first a necessary process. But Liberal Judaism is not Orthodox Judaism minus something. It is the Judaism of the past translated into the present, not only modified to suit the present, but also enlarged and enriched with the knowledge of the present. It is, also, Judaism enlarged to universal dimensions, not confined to any particular environment, but freed to live in every civilised land.

We all agree that Jews can be fully Jews in other lands, that Judaism can live and extend its power throughout the civilised universe. Among other things, that belief lays the duty on every Jewish community to think out the meaning of Jewish teaching for the economic, social, industrial and political problems of its country. There are great practical difficulties in the way of the fulfilment of this duty. These difficulties must be faced and risked for the sake of the living power of Judaism. Judaism grew up in the effort to make a nation religious. Some account it as a weakness in ancient Jewish teaching that it concerns itself with the national rather than with the individual. We may agree that this was a shortcoming which, however, Judaism itself soon rectified.

But that early experience should preclude for all time the possibility of interpreting Judaism as a teaching concerned only with the life of the individual and his spiritual advancement; it is equally concerned with the life of the nation and its moral advancement. Whatever other Jews may feel, Liberal Jews may not say of any moral issue in the national life: "What has this to do with Judaism?" We may not say it because we believe Judaism is at home wherever civilisation is at home; and that it can help all sections of the human race to advance in civilisation.

We have then, in our Judaism, a threefold emphasis: on the spiritual life of the individual, on the unity of Universal Israel, and on the corporate obligation of each Jewish community to work for the spiritual and moral advancement of the nation of which it is a part; an obligation which it owes both to the nation and to Judaism. Liberal Judaism answers three questions: what does Judaism mean to the Jew? What does the Jew mean to the House of Israel? What does the House of Israel mean to the world and to its nations? And they are all answered under the instruction of the best in the Judaism of the past, combined with the present thought of the human race.

The times present us with a great opportunity, an opportunity that lies in a great need. From all sides come reports of spiritual weakness. Diverse causes have worked to disintegrate the life of many sections of Jewry. But, as in all the great needs in human life, the ultimate way of salvation lies in the human spirit. If Jews have grown weak in their attachments to what is Jewish, it is because Judaism has lost its hold on the spirit of the Jew. All who love Judaism and believe in the destiny of the Jewish people must feel a challenge in these conditions. And the challenge is no less a one than this: Can Judaism live? And our answer is: It must live! For us the means to assure its life is to express its teachings in a way that shall answer the longings of Jewish hearts, give some light to Jewish minds seeking through the universe for its secret, and satisfy the eternal hunger of the Jewish soul, so that it shall live.

The Canadian Jewish Review is still the only Jewish Publication in Canada printed in any language reaching the Jewish community which is able to claim membership in the Audit Bureau of Circulations.

Dr. Ritter reminds his fellow-countrymen that Hitler's "ideal" of a Germanic empire, from which all lesser peoples would be liquidated, was already being carried out by the SS Einsatzgruppen genocide teams. Leaders of these groups, incidentally, were hanged by United States officials in Landsberg prison in June, after a considerable protest from German public opinion.

Dr. Ritter puts his finger on a vital contemporary issue, not only inside Germany, when he suggests that Hitler fought Russia not to defeat bolshevism or to preserve Western culture, but to impose his own brand of "sub-humanity." He finds that anti-Semitism was "primary" in Hitler's political thinking, not merely a propaganda device, says the New York Times.

The German nation, Dr. Ritter says, must bear the frightful responsibility for his rule. His conclusion is that both the man and his system were "over-ripe," meaning they were bound to fall.

If the German public can learn anything, Dr. Ritter says, let them learn that Germany's defeat was not merely a historic accident; it cannot be blamed on the enemy's superior potential, bad luck with the promised "miracle weapons," or a stab in the back by German resistance forces. Rather, he warns, the future of the German people will depend on whether they succeed in releasing themselves from Hitler's system inwardly as well as outwardly.

Tom Gard's Note Book

New bunk beds in the children's rooms at the cottage presented a mattress problem. After much shopping in second-hand stores and at auctions, four of the right size were finally rounded up. We undertook to cover them with some faded chintz drapes put into discard after our decorating spree this spring. With the whole family working at it, the job was soon done. Now the surface of the mattresses can be kept fresh and clean — and the children can graduate from army cots.

Pin Box

It was a request for a new pin box after the cardboard one finally collapsed that reminded me I was out of shaving soap. What's the connection between pins and shaving soap? That empty soap tub would be just the thing to hold common pins. Right in the midst of the mattress-covering bee I took time off to clean it up and decorate the top with a few pine cones to serve as a handle. Junior suggested it would make a good penny bank — it might at that!

Does the lawnmower ever get in the way of the automobile when you drive into the garage? Does it take up too much room in the basement? Shown is a little idea I've found most useful to keep it right in place — a couple of inches above the floor. Be sure to nail the cleats securely so as to carry the weight.

Save That Garden Hose

Every year I vow something will be done to preserve the rubber garden hose. It gets more wear and tear being coiled and uncoiled and rots more from the sun and undrained water than from actual use. The idea I am eventually going to use is not original but it will be effective. Two pulleys will be placed under the eaves on the north side of the house. A rope attachment will accommodate a 25-foot length on each quite handily and then the hose will be dry and up out of the way when not in constant use.
